Nicola Tremain (b. 1978) is a British artist whose work explores the space between observation and abstraction, often drawing on landscape and natural forms.

Her paintings capture fleeting moments of light, movement, and memory, evoking a sense of place that is felt as much as seen. Rather than fixed depictions, her paintings invite a slower, more intuitive way of looking, where atmosphere, colour and composition guide the experience.

She also has an established career in documentary filmmaking, which continues to inform her visual sensibility.
